

Sarah Flain: Administrator

Sarah is the most recent team member at STEMPOINT, (add this if you want to date it- joining at the start of 2024), with over 20 years of fundraising experience, she is responsible for securing funding to run the charity's projects (or 'work' instead of projects if you think that is a wider view).

I was thrilled to take on the role of Fundraising Manager at STEMPOINT at the start of 2024, and I am looking forward to developing strong relationships with existing and potential funders to ensure young people have opportunities and access to the amazing world of STEM.

I strongly believe that children need to be inspired and encouraged from a young age to get involved with STEM subjects. A hands-on approach is the best way for children and young people to become more inquisitive and to breakdown the perceptual barriers around who can study these subjects or apply for STEM jobs.

With two children, being married to a teacher and with lots of friends who are teachers, I have a real insight into how stretched schools are and the difficulties they face recruiting teachers in these vital subject areas. Which reinforces just how essential these additional opportunities are for students and how they need to be delivered by experts in each subject area. Knowing STEMPOINT can enrich their learning and open their eyes to new potential career options makes me so proud to be a part of this amazing charity.
