I have taught science for over 20 years, teaching up to A-level in Chemistry and Physics. I have led science departments in 2 schools, in East London and in Welwyn Garden City. I have taken up numerous leadership roles with schools in Hertfordshire. Currently as Headteacher of The Knights Templar school, I work with colleagues to develop our STEM provision, I was appointed in 2022.

Following a degree in Chemistry at Bristol University I spent two years in Ghana teaching science through 'Voluntary Services Overseas', It was an unforgettable experience and I have been teaching ever since. I have seen the impact that creative STEM experiences can have in engaging and challenging young people. There are such opportunities here in Hertfordshire and I am passionate that students from this area should benefit from them.
