

Helen Spencer

I have been with the organisation since 1998 and became Managing Director in 2016. I have a background in event management, administration and customer service, but STEMPOINT ignited my passion to make a difference to young people.

My own enthusiasm for STEM comes from an interest in how people think and behave; I studied Psychology with the Open University as a mature student, gaining a First Class degree in 2011. I went on to attain an MSc in Occupational Psychology two years later.

I am on the Steering Committee for the local LEP Careers Hub and have recently joined the Herts LEP's Skills & Employment Board.

I have been awarded a Paul Harris. Fellowship from local Rotary Clubs in recognition of services to education.

I manage a small but very committed and talented team to offer schools and colleges across the East of England the best possible advice and support. It is my privilege to work with many inspirational people from STEM industry and academia.
